A KISS GOODNIGHT

Producer, director and (in this case) actor Clint Eastwood kisses his screen and real-life daughter, 4-year-old Francesca Eastwood, in the just-wrapped mystery 'True Crime.'

Eastwood's 'True Crime' a family affair

By KIRSTIE WILDE

WITH TONGUE firmly planted in cheek, Clint Eastwood described directing his wife, Dina Ruiz, in her motion picture acting debut:

"Oh she was so difficult, always complaining. She wanted her own trailer!"

Eastwood was remarkably relaxed during an interview with The Pine Cone on the set of his new movie "True Crime" this week — especially considering that he is producing, directing and starring in the film, that he directs his wife and daughter in their first tries at acting, that he was right in the middle of shooting the wrenchingly emotional final scenes of an innocent man about to be executed, and that between takes he had to deal with a reporter wondering how he gets his 4-year-old daughter to cry on cue.

"Oh that was easy," he said. "It was late in the day and Frannie was having a typical kid meltdown. So I signaled the cameraman to start rolling, snuck a little fake blood on her forehead with my thumb and she was great." He explained that even at her tender age, Frannie has some experience in the Big Time: she spent hours on the set of "Titanic" with her mother Frances Fisher, who played the rigid and desperate Mrs. Dewitt Bukater in the film.

Ruiz brought their 2-year old, Morgan, to Oakland for the six weeks of filming at the Claremont Hotel, San Quentin prison and the Alameda Naval Air Station. And to round out Old Home Week, her former co-anchor and good buddy Dan Green of KSBW-TV arrived for his debut on the big screen, playing a Bay Area television reporter. Channel 2's Dennis Richmond and two other real-life Oakland reporters also have bit parts in "True Crime."

No credibility

Ruiz described Eastwood's role in the movie as "an alcoholic, womanizing pig!" Her husband says he plays an investigative reporter on the skids, busted from the New York Times after an embarrassing crusade to free a condemned murderer who turned out to be guilty. "Now his wife, his friends, everyone laughs at him. He has no credibility and spends most of his time boozing and sleeping with his editor's wife. But then he gets an inkling that another man on Death Row (played by Isaiah Washington) is innocent. The story is about what happens in the next 24 hours,

How will Carmel pay $5M Sunset tab?

By PAUL WOLF

AMID THE jubilation over the Carmel City Council's "pledge" of $5 million to the $15.5 Sunset Theater plan, there is a sobering question: how does the city make good on it?

The likely answer: borrow the money.

Without a liquid $5 million at the ready, the city would have to get the money from an "outside source," according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar. That, of course, will mean interest and payments over 20 years or so.

"We don't have $5 million in cash," Kersnar said.

Spirits were high June 19 when the council voted 5-0 to give conceptual approval to the Adaptive Reuse plan. But the council has been here before. Thunderous applause in the council chambers greeted the February, 1997, unani-

Illegal windows get last-minute pardon

By TAMARA GRIPPI

WITH ONE member changing his vote, the Carmel Planning Commission broke its earlier deadlock and allowed Carmel residents Lori and Erik Davidson to keep the brand new wood- and aluminum-clad windows on their Mission Street home. Voting 5-2, the commission granted a "retroactive approval" of the windows June 24.

The windows became an issue after city planners did the final inspection of the Davidson's remodel and discovered that

Carmel's new judge brings business experience to municipal bench

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL ATTORNEY Susan Dauphiné — who will be sworn in as a new Monterey County Municipal Court judge June 30 — found out that donning the black robes requires going through a trial of your own.

During the three-month selection process, Dauphiné, 54 — a former president of the Monterey County Bar Association — had to face the criticism of scores of attorneys she's gone up against in court.

When an attorney is nominated, the California State Bar's Judicial Nomination Evaluation Commission sends questionnaires to lawyers practicing in the same county. Then the nominee has to meet with members of the commission and answer her critics.

In Dauphiné's case, she didn't see the criticism as severe. In addition, she looked at the whole process as a rare learning experience.

"When you are a public official, you will face criticism," she said. "You need to be able to deal with it and respond to it and still believe in your principles and what's right."

Even after jumping through all the hoops, Dauphiné didn't know when, if ever, she'd get a call from the Governor's office, where the final decision is made.

The call came on June 1, just Found on the south end of the beach, this dead animal was determined to be a bobcat — but some have doubts.

Mystery cat found on Carmel Beach

By TAMARA GRIPPI

ITS LEGS are all wrong for a bobcat, and it has been determined not to be a mountain lion cub. Also, it is too big to be felis domesticus, that is, house cat.

Some are wondering if the dead animal found June 18 on Carmel beach is a mixed-breed — perhaps a cat version of the mule.

The Monterey County SPCA examined the animal and determined that it was a bobcat, kind of. However, its legs were uncharacteristically long and its tail was also somewhat longer than that of typical bobcats, according to Nancy Ratto, supervising animal control officer with Monterey County Animal Control.

The animal wandered down to the beach and was chased by dogs into the ocean where it drowned, according to reports received by the SPCA. A passerby discovered the bedraggled body on the rocks near Santa Lucia around 4:30 p.m. June 18.

The animal could have wandered down to the beach from any nearby area, including Carmel, Pacific Grove or Carmel Valley, said Maia Carroll, SPCA public relations coordinator.

"We haven't heard of a lot of bobcat sightings," Ratto said. "Most of the time they're nocturnal. They basically live in the woodsy area of the whole county."

The cat that wandered to the beach was already lethargic and sick when it made its appearance. Carroll said bobcats usually steer clear of human gathering places, such as beaches.

Carroll cautioned dog owners that wildlife can turn up anywhere, even at the beach. In this case, the dogs may have chased the bobcat to its death and risked getting bitten.

SETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT

IN AN article last week, The Pine Cone reported that there were two Carmel High School valedictorians. Actually, there were three.

We made a significant omission — and her name is Amy Melton.

Melton spoke at a different part of the June 12 ceremony than her co-valedictorians Sanford Greenfield and Alexander Vorobiov. At CHS, she maintained a GPA that exceeded 4.0.

In addition, last month she finished first in calculus at the county-wide Mathletics event. She has also been awarded multiple scholarships, including one from Carmel Kiwanis.

Melton is bound for U.C. Berkeley in the fall.

Also last week The Pine Cone inaccurately reported — in the article, "Why is Carmel so poor?" — that a proposal to seek a pro bono master plan study of the Scout House was rejected. In fact, the Carmel City Council is exploring the idea of having a volunteer review of uses and facilities at the city-owned building on Mission near Sunset Center.

Police & Sheriff's Log

Man had expired registration and fake green card

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, JUNE 14

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of unusual noises on Lincoln. Area check of a vacant house being repainted yielded nothing unusual.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Small black dog at large on Carpenter chased back into yard. Nobody home.

Carmel area: Carmel Police Department reported that a red pickup occupied by several subjects had possibly fired a gun near a residence in the vicinity of Atherton Drive and Highway 1. Deputies stopped the pickup on Carmel Valley Road at Via Petra. It was later determined the subjects had used a baseball bat to smash a street sign.

Carmel Valley: A Carmel Valley Village restaurant owner has reported she has been unable to get her rent deposit back from her landlord.

MONDAY, JUNE 15

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of possible sleeper in a vehicle on First. Only thing sleeping in the car was a dog. No violation.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman reports what she thought was a boat on fire off Carmel Beach. Boat was observed to be fine.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Complaint of barking dog on Dolores. Dog was never heard barking. Possible unrest between neighbors.

Carmel Valley: Two Laurel Drive individuals were involved in a heated argument. During the argument, the man threw a crowbar to the ground, which hit the woman in the foot, causing a small scratch. Both said it was an accident. The male subject stated he had held a gun to his head, but it was empty and he was not feeling suicidal. A rifle and handgun were removed for a 72-hour hold.

Carmel Valley: Laurel Drive resident called to report her upstairs tenant was making a lot of noise and may be destroying the room. The tenant said she was fine, and a visual inspection of the room showed no signs of damage. It should be noted that when the tenant was contacted, her dog came out of the doorway and had to be controlled. The tenant was told her dog was pepper sprayed, and to be careful when handling it.

Pebble Beach: A French guest reported the theft of her camera while she was staying at the Inn at Spanish Bay.

TUESDAY, JUNE 16

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a man looking into windows of houses on Second near San Antonio. Area checked. Gone on arrival.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a person painting on the sidewalk on Dolores. He had broken down his easel and was leaving upon my arrival.

Carmel Valley: A Middle Canyon resident reported receiving annoying phone calls from a known individual. The two had a business deal that fell through. The subject is now making repeated calls to the resident, who asked authorities to tell the subject to stop.

Carmel area: A Hacienda Place resident reported having problems with his 14-year-old son. He requested assistance taking him to a rehab facility. He was given phone numbers to local agencies that could help.

Carmel area: A cab driver from San Jose requested assistance with a fare he drove to the area. The parents of the fare met at the location to pay for the ride.

Carmel area: Neighbors of a Highway One residence called, concerned that there was not supposed to be anyone at the house. Upon contact, it was found that the subject was there to clean the owner's floors. The owner was contacted, and he knew the subject was supposed to be there.

Pebble Beach: Individual at the Spyglass Golf Course reported that he was hit in the temple by a golf ball on June 10 at 2:45 p.m. He wanted this incident documented.

Carmel area: An unknown party reported possible shots fired at a vehicle near Highway 1 and Carpenter. The victim vehicle matching the description given by the reporting party was found parked in front of a residence on Carpenter. The resident was contacted, and reported no shots were ever fired. His vehicle has primed gray spots on the side that the reporting party could have mistaken as bullet holes.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a vehicle similar to one reportedly involved in disappearance of Seaside teenager. Officer checked vehicle — it did not have blue and gold tags. A neighbor said the vehicle comes and goes on a daily basis. Info relayed to sheriff's office. Another citizen said the missing teenager looked familiar and may have come into her tattoo shop in Marina with a group of friends some time ago. Advised to contact sheriff's task force.

Ruling safeguards round-the-clock ambulance in Carmel

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA's independent ambulance service has survived a takeover attempt by Monterey County, thanks to a California Appeals Court decision handed down this week.

Consequently, the round-the-clock ambulance in the Fifth Avenue fire station is safe for now.

"This decision means minutes in (superior) response times, and that translates to lives," said Carmel Mayor Ken White. "All we've been trying to do is keep our level of ambulance service where it is. Now we can do that."

The court's 18-page ruling puts an end to the county's attempt to take over the entire territory now handled by the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance (CRFA) — including Carmel-by-the-Sea and Carmel Valley.

The decision, however, was not favorable for the Highlands, where 3,000 residents now must be served by the county system, American Medical Response.

The Highland fire district wanted to stay in the CRFA. However, the three-judge Appeals Court panel ruled June 22 that the territory doesn't meet the criteria for staying independent of the five-year-old consolidated county system.

Offering comfort

County Health Director Robert Melton offered reassurance to the Highlands' population, saying response times will actually improve. For starters, the nearest county ambulance is located at the Crossroads, rather than the Fifth Avenue station.

But Carmel Fire Chief Bill Hill remains deeply skeptical about Melton's evaluation. He argues that the county is in the practice of "shifting" The Crossroads ambulance around in such a way that it is not reliable in any one location. Also, Hill notes that the closest county ambulance at night is well north, at Highway 1 and Aguajito Road.

Highlands Fire Chief Lanny White was not prepared to comment on the issue of response times. He did say, however, that speed of response was the main reason his fire district joined the litigation against the county.

Highlands residents have been paying about $27,000 to be part of the CRFA, which responds to about 50 calls annually in that area, according to Hill.

Even though Carmel voters last November would not vote to create a permanent tax funding source for the CRFA, residents and city officials have remained committed to maintaining their local service. Many Carmelites say the county system is spread too thinly, despite its high-tech dispatching and coordinating systems.

Melton said there is serious disagreement over the question of response times, since the different ambulance operations calculate response times differently.

A relieved CV Fire Chief Bill Sims said this week that dissolving the CRFA would have added six or more minutes to the average response to the Carmel Valley community of 6,800.

The court also ruled unanimously that the county must pay more than $300,000 in legal fees to the Carmel, Carmel Valley and Mid Valley fire districts.

FILM

before the man is scheduled to be executed.

Eastwood, who has had well-publicized court battles with gossip columnists and reporters in the past (and who just this spring won $25,000 for the Carmel Youth Center from The Globe tabloid for lies it printed about him) is amused by playing such a low-class member of the journalism profession:

The Pine Cone: "Was it hard to play a reprobate?"

Eastwood: "Noooo . . . actually it was quite easy. No effort at all, really."

Meeting the inmates

"True Crimes" filmed on location at San Quentin, where the crew got some hair-raising glimpses of life in the penitentiary. Inmates were yelling and screaming from their cells when word spread that Clint Eastwood was inside. The actor remembered thinking, "Here are all these guys who want to see my pictures and they have no access to a theater!"

During one scene, a real convict, shackled and wearing a hygiene mask over his face ("he spits and bites and the guards are all afraid of AIDS," according to Eastwood) busted right into the scene. "He looked just like Hannibal Lechter and all the actors were wild-eyed, so we left it in the picture. But then I asked a guard, 'Will that guy ever get out?' and they answered, 'Oh yeah, someday he probably will.'"

The theme of the movie, a "half-assed search for redemption," as Eastwood describes it, necessarily deals with the issue of a (possibly) innocent man condemned to the gas chamber. But the director says the film is not his statement against the death penalty — quite the contrary, "I've always been of a mind that these people who do these horrific crimes, how are you going to rehabilitate them? Why should society suffer because of these criminals. The death penalty is the ultimate deterrent."

Recreating San Quentin

The final scenes being shot June 23 were inside a giant hangar at the Alameda Naval Air Station, where set designers replicated the inside of San Quentin's death row. The gas chamber is to the right. Nine-foot barred walls secure the holding area where the condemned prisoner says his last good-byes to his wife and child. The black paint on the steel bars is slightly lumpy, as though it had been painted over and over through the years. But a member of the crew says the cells were not salvaged from some old prison; they were manufactured right there in the hangar. A close inspection reveals that the rust creeping through the thick black paint and the dust in the crevasses are all fake: they were applied by tiny brushes with minute quantities of orange, brown and gray paint. The details are curious to the outsider: why go to such trouble when they will never be seen by the movie fan?

The answer may be to help the actors feel their character's situation, to dredge up the emotions necessary to play their gut-wrenching scenes. Lisa Hamilton, who portrays the condemned man's wife, sobs and wails and fights to hold on to the sight of her husband until the very last moment . . . and she does the scene at least a dozen times. Between each take, she is totally silent, staring at the cracks in the floor. Then she exhales with a deep, abdominal huhhhhhfff. Eastwood quietly says, "O.K. action." And at the end of the two-minute scene, the echoes of her screams reverberate through the cold concrete hangar.

The strength of the acting in "True Crimes" even affected the crew, who are notoriously cynical on movie sets. "Everybody was crying yesterday," said cameraman Steve Campanelli, "tears just rolling down their faces. But today I am operating this contraption (the giant, bulky

Daughter Franny had plenty of movie-set experience before her screen debut in 'True Crime'— accompanying her actress-mother Frances Fisher on location in 'Titanic.'

Steadicam) and I have to concentrate so hard. If tears get on my monitor I might trip and fall down!"

Even the taciturn director was affected, according to another actor on the movie. "Yesterday I couldn't believe my eyes," said Ed Silva, who plays a prison guard. "There was this real emotional scene with Lisa, and I looked up at Clint and tears were running down his cheeks. He was really touched."

"The whole movie is like this; just about every scene is an emotional one," said make-up artist Jim McCoy. "If an actor dries up, we have crystals to put in their eyes which are just like onion and make the tears flow. But Lisa hasn't needed them at all today." The day before, he said a child actress named Penny Bae Bridges "had to turn the tears on and off like water" in her good-bye scene with her condemned father. Eastwood said a lucky accident helped the 7-year-old get through the roughest scene like a pro.

"She accidentally smacked her head on the trailer and she was crying. Her mother was trying to get her to work but she didn't stop crying. So I signaled the Steadicam to roll, and asked her to 'say that line, say that line.' The more she said it the harder she cried. We sometimes even use tricks like that on experienced actors to get more realism."

Eastwood laughed about how directors convinced children to cry in the old days. "They used to torment the kids," he said. "Like Jackie Coogan, they used to tell him he'd never see his mother again to get him sobbing. That's why all those child actors grew up to be drunks!"

Editing at Mission Ranch

"True Crime" was set to wrap June 26, and Eastwood and his editors plan to start cutting the film at his offices in Mission Ranch and at Malpaso Productions in Burbank. His publicist recalls why Eastwood chose the name for his movie company. "Malpaso means 'dangerous step' and that's what everyone told Clint he was taking when he set out to produce and direct his own films," said Marco Barla. "A lot of others went broke trying to do everything."

So far, Eastwood isn't showing any signs, except in the movie, of being on the skids in Oakland. Acting the part of a has-been reporter at the Tribune is still a long way up from where he started, in real life, in the 1930s. "I used to deliver the paper as a kid, when I was 10 or 11," he recalled with a laugh. "I wrapped 'em and chucked 'em on the lawns. Four out of five families took the Trib in those days. And they paid me 14 bucks . . . a month!"

Web site helps identify pitch canker

By TAMARA GRIPPI

ARE YOUR trees infected with pitch canker? Now you can get a better idea of what to look for by logging onto the Internet.

The California Pitch Canker Task Force web site includes a special identification section with vivid photographs showing the telltale dying branches and oozing pitch of infected trees. You can access it at:

http://frap.cdf.ca.gov/pitch\_canker

The site, funded by the California Department of Forestry, includes information on current research, experts in the field and tips on how to prevent and manage the disease.

"We're trying to give everyone the best information we can," said Carmel City Forester Gary Kelly.

So far, 12,000 "hits" have been recorded for that home page, according to Russ Henley, with the California Department of Forestry.

The task force's site also has "hyperlinks" to connect people with other information sources on the Internet, Henley said. Even if people don't know the exact address, they'll be able to reach the task force's home page by typing "pitch canker" into the search engines.

As new information about the disease becomes available, Henley will update the web site. In the absence of a cure, it advises homeowners to remove an infected tree only when the canker has reached the trunk or if the entire top is dying, Kelly said.

The Calif. Board of Forestry recently declared a 23.1 million acre pitch canker "zone of infestation" — everything west of Interstate 5 from Mendocino to San Diego. The declaration is largely symbolic, Kelly said. However, he hopes it will alert people not to take infected lumber out of the area.

mous approval of the $21 million BOOR/A plan — a plan that was abandoned earlier this year after fund raisers reluctantly decided it was just too costly.

Now, city officials acknowledge they need to wrestle with possible new taxes, fees, or parking charges as a way to keep the Sunset Center project from soaking up all the city's available money.

Paid parking?

Despite these concerns, the eagerness to move forward is evident. With the city pledging to chip-in $5 million, the private, non-profit Sunset Center for the Arts is looking into the feasibility of raising the remaining $10.5 million from private sources, according to the group's president, Nancy Doolittle.

"Now that we have the city's endorsement of this project, we can move forward with confidence," Doolittle said, happy that the action was unanimous.

The fund raisers are retaining Bob Carter, president of Ketchum, Inc., of Dallas, to try to get a handle on how much money may be available both in Monterey County and among outsiders loyal to Carmel's performing arts scene.

Kersnar said making good on the city's pledge would be possible if the city enacted no-meter pay-for-parking. Such a plan would not be a new tax and therefore wouldn't have to go to a vote. "Voters these days are not inclined to approve anything," Kersnar said.

Asking out-of-towners to pay for parking (locals would probably be exempt) is, technically speaking, "a rental fee for public space," Kersnar said.

The city administrator said such a revenue program has the potential to raise $1 million a year, far more than what would be needed to finance new debt for Sunset Center.

The financing of a $5 million bond would run about $475,000 annually for 20 years. The city's annual budget is $9.4 million. It is now paying $635,000 a year on the debt associated with the purchases of two properties — Rio Park (open space near Carmel Mission) and Vista Lobos (the city facility and lot east of Junipero).

Half of the current debt — $317,500 — will be retired in June 1999. That means $317,500 will be freed up for new spending or investments.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said she supported the $5 million pledge with "trepidation."

"We would be replacing one debt for another," Hazdovac said, "but I didn't want to be negative by putting up road blocks before (the fund-raising) effort even got started."

Kersnar said a new steady source of revenue is needed "so we don't have to spend virtually every discretionary dollar we have" on Sunset Center.

appreciation for the rules of evidence while participating in a hearing in another county.

The hearing — in which she represented an elected official accused of sexual harassment — lasted six months and was a far cry from typical courtroom practice, Dauphiné said.

"I saw what can happen when you don't have rules of evidence," she said. "Over and over we heard rumors and repetition of rumors."

Changing roles

In the last few weeks, Dauphiné has been busy wrapping up her work and finding other attorneys to finish up her cases. June 30 — the day Dauphiné is sworn into office — will also mark the last time her weekly law column will run in the Monterey County Herald. "Judges are not permitted to give legal advice," she explained.

But Dauphiné says that educating the public about how the law works should be an important goal for both judges and lawyers.

"When people understand (the law), then they voluntarily comply," she said. "A lot of problems occur because of lack of understanding."

Dauphiné was a partner in the Fenton and Keller law firm in Monterey before she left to start her own practice in April of this year.

She graduated from Stanford University in 1965 and earned her law degree from Columbia University in 1968.

after Dauphiné left for Africa to visit her daughter, who is serving in the Peace Corps. Nearly 10 days went by before Dauphiné was able to get in touch with her office to hear the good news.

"I wasn't sure if it was a malarial dream at the time," she joked.

'Rock solid'

With 23 years of civil court experience as a trial attorney and legal adviser in Monterey County, Dauphiné will be a welcome addition to the courts, particularly to the municipal bench, where most judges are former prosecutors, according to Monterey County Superior Court judge (and former presiding judge) Jonathan Price.

"She has a good reputation as a rock-solid attorney," Price said of Dauphiné. "She's a very intelligent and thoughtful person, and I know she'll bring all those qualities to the bench."

Dauphiné is experienced in discrimination suits and cases of sexual harassment, medical malpractice, legal malpractice and personal injury.

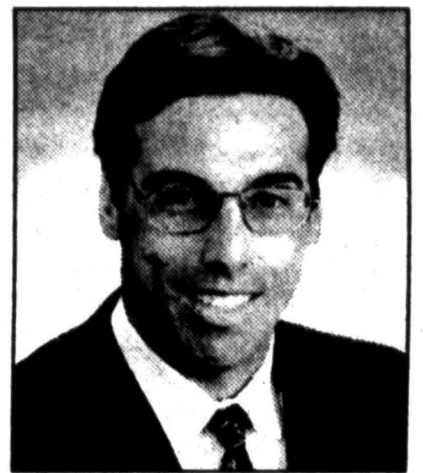

"I have the advantage of bringing my experience from the everyday business world to help me in making decisions," Dauphiné said. "Trying cases, working in the courtroom better prepares one to be a judge because you know the dynamics of the jury, the witnesses, the rules of evidence."

In 1989, Dauphiné earned a new

Furniture Styles

PART 3 OF 5 PARTS

I find I'm so enthralled by my home furnishings re-search that I end up reading far more than I planned, simply because it is so interesting and one thing leads to another. Let me now lead you to...

French—Although a lot of furniture today is generically referred to as "French," many of these designs were adapted from the Regency period, the reigns of Louis XV and Louis XVI, and from French Provincial and Country designs. French design elements can also be seen in the work of English and American cabinetmakers of the 18th century who were greatly influenced by earlier French styles.

• REGENCY: This style emerged during the eight-year period following the death of Louis XIV and exhibited more flowing lines than the rectangular shapes of Louis XIV, less classical ornamentation, and wide use of the cabriole leg.

• LOUIS XV (1715-1774) furniture is marked by sinuous curves and contours. During this period, the straight lines, right angles, bilateral symmetry, and majestic presence so characteristic of Louis XIV furniture was abandoned in favor of a more fluid, comfortable style with extreme ornamentation such as inlaying, painting, gilding, and elaborate metal mounts, wreaths, flowers, lozenges, and human figures were major motifs, curved or rounded case fronts, cabriole legs with scrolled feet, but no stretchers, curved legs and onyx, marble, or wooden tops on tables, short flaring arms, and tight seats and backs, and sharply curved supports on upholstery.

• FRENCH COUNTRY (or Country French) embraces both French Provincial and modern casual French styling. It is simpler in form and more casual in design than French Provincial. Like the French countryside, French Country interiors are washed in light and blazing with rich hues of blue, yellow, red, and green. Hallmark pieces of the French Country style are cupboard beds, wedding armoires (a traditional gift to a wedding couple, in which they stored their most treasured possessions), and the maden clock (tall, narrow clocks with nipped-in "waists"). The finishes were usually washed or natural with simply styling, a subtle use of cabriole leg, turned posts, and understated hardware, a prevalent use of pine, sense of intimacy, colorful painted dressers and chairs, some use of marquetry, and extensive use of traditional motifs of happiness, love, and prosperity.

• FRENCH PROVINCIAL: From 1610 to 1800, craftsmen in the many French provinces crafted furniture that was casually mannered and substantial enough for rural life. Like the American Colonial furniture influenced by various 18th century and Georgian designers, French Provincial furniture demonstrates the influence of its French design forebears, though in much more simplified versions of comfortable and simple pieces without heavy carving, painting, or gilding. This furniture was more likely to be of washed and natural finishes with simple cabriole legs or straight legs, upholstered, wood, or cane seats, and to feature shaped aprons on tables, buffets, and cupboards. This period originated ladder-back chairs.

• LOUIS XVI furniture reflects a return to the classic designs of Greece and Rome during the reign of Louis XVI and his queen Marie Antoinette. Ornament for ornament's sake was eliminated in favor of simple forms and classic architectural symmetry. The overall effect was graceful, dainty, and elegant.

Now that we've had French Country, next time we'll explore American Country.

Jo Mora: unorthodox master artist

By SISSI MALEKI

MAKE A LIST of the unorthodox 20th century artists and you'd be considered seriously uninformed if you left out Jo Mora's name.

After all, how many others could you name who had been born in Uruguay to a well-to-do family, lived as an adopted member of the Hopi Indian tribe in Arizona and worked as a nomadic cowboy and ranch hand (just to name a few intriguing oddities)?

The sheer variety of artworks produced by this man is awe-inspiring. To begin with the most recognizable, many locals are undoubtedly familiar with the Father Junipero Serra statue that never fails as a driving landmark for guests visiting Carmel.

Oddly enough it was Samuel F. B. Morse, the developer of Pebble Beach, who commissioned Mora to create a piece of artwork for his new subdivision in Carmel Woods back in 1922.

And, as with most of his works, Mora applied a very careful process to create the Serra statue. First, a miniature scale model was made with clay. Then plastic molding material was poured it. Any changes could be made at this point, before the actual carving on a piece of solid oak would begin. It took six months to complete; he also designed the protective canopy and platform for the ultimate resting place of the statue.

Another masterpiece is the Serra cenotaph inside the Carmel Mission. The artist presented the mission founder lying in state, along with his close associates, Fathers Crespi, Lopez and Lasuén.

Surrounding the piece are bas-reliefs of historic events in California, including an Indian uprising. The complete work was created in bronze and California travertine marble.

His prodigious list of sculptures, found throughout the United States, includes the following: the Will Rogers Memorial in Oklahoma, the County Courthouse in Salinas, the monument to Cervantes in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park, and heroic figures for numerous other buildings in Los Angeles, Portland, and San Francisco.

Adding to these masterpieces are amazingly detailed and highly colorful maps of various California regions — of course including Carmel and 17-Mile-Drive. (You might want to check your attic for a rolled up and forgotten masterpiece!)

Mora also authored several books, such as Trail Dust and Saddle Leather. It is filled with information and illustrations about saddles, bits, branding and roping cattle. And who better to write such a book than a former cowboy!

There are dioramas, such as "La Novia" made for the former Hotel Del Monte, (now the Naval Postgraduate School) and carved out of hydrastone and set, half life-size, in a massive walnut frame. It celebrates the wonderful traditions in early California weddings with a sculptured scene of a bridal couple as they leave the church mounted on a horse and leading a procession of relatives and friends.

Not to be forgotten in Mora's repertoire are restaurant menus, jewelry, milk cartons, silver coins, murals for the Carmel Dairy (now Mediterranean Market), SCRIIP dollars, book illustrations, paintings, cartoons, and advertising.

Reportedly, he had a fortune invested in special tools and when he used them, a friend of his once said, he was "like a surgeon performing a mastoid operation."

Jo Mora was once quoted as saying, of Father Serra: "He was a man who loved his work with all his soul."

Well, it took a man just like that to recognize another kindred soul . . .

The Monterey Museum of Art, 559 Pacific Street in Monterey, is hosting a special show this summer, Jo Mora, Artist and Writer, featuring a wide variety of the artist's works.

Museum hours are Wednesday - Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m..

Also, the museum will have several special events marking the artist's life, including,

■ A Tribute to Jo Mora cowboy poetry reading at 1 p.m. on July 11,

■ A Cowboy Cartooning class for children at 10 a.m. on July 25,

■ The Sculpture and Art of Jo Mora, a session with the exhibit's curator, Peter Hiller, at 7 p.m. on August 5.

People covered by Medicare receive a barrage of mail and phone calls from managed-care companies urging them to sign up. About 15 percent of Medicare enrollees have done so. Changes in the Medicare program, effective this year, will confront enrollees with more choices and options, benefits and restrictions than ever before. Some changes are aimed at shifting more people to managed-care coverage. But those who prefer Medicare's fee-for-service coverage can continue with that program and choose their doctors, hospitals and other health-care providers.

Anker, now retiring, put down roots at Church of Wayfarer

By PAUL WOLF

AMID THE apple, fig and bay trees, and surrounded by poppies, agapanthus and sage, the Rev. Charles Anker described the symbolic meaning of a garden in an urban — even a village — setting.

"It puts you closer to the heart of God," he said. "I see the garden as something that keeps people in touch with Creation. It has the ability to reawaken your sense of wonder."

As of the end of the month, the senior minister of the Church of the Wayfarer — the continuing vision behind the blossoming, award-winning grounds that help make the church a landmark — will retire after 22 years with the congregation.

That is an usually long stay at one parish of a Methodist minister, but Anker had put down roots — in every sense of the word.

"The ecclesiastical word I would use to describe my service is blessed," reflected the Carmel resident.

'I see the garden as something that keeps people in touch with Creation.'

— Charles Anker

Now 65, Anker said he has not ruled out the possibility of accepting another appointment or serving as interim minister wherever he may be needed. "I really don't know what I am doing to do," he said.

The western conference of the Methodist Church has selected Robert Schwartz, from a congregation in Bakersfield, as successor. Anker gives Schwartz high praise in advance of his arrival. Anker will lead his last service this Sunday, June 28.

Blossoming centerpiece

Locals who are not part of the congregation's flock of 300 or so might first think of the garden when they think of the church.

apples and figs to the more obscure Tamarist tree, which is mentioned in Genesis.

He said he is not a stickler for accuracy on biblical plant types, explaining, "Certain species (now) have different names from what's in the Bible, and scholars debate about what these species are supposed to be. In the Bible, tulips might not be called tulips, but something poetic, like 'Lilies of the Valley,'" he said.

"I just work here, but he has the eye of an artist," joked Wayfarer gardener Gordon Russell, characterizing Anker as the continuing vision behind the garden. "He has a great feeling for colors and heights and everything else that goes into the garden."

Anker gave credit to Mrs. Raymond Chrisman for her insistence, some 14 years ago, that the garden be redesigned and improved. "I always loved gardens, so I just pursued it mainly based on my instinct."

Twenty-two years ago, Anker began at Church of the Wayfarer as associate minister to senior pastor Paul Woudenberg. Anker said an unusual bond was forged between him and his congregation over the years. Twice its members provided enormous comfort to him. The occasions were in 1976, when his 10-year-old son died and in 1992, when his wife died.

Of Carmel he said, "You take this atmosphere for granted. It's not until you travel and take a look at other places that you realize you live in an enchanted place."

Fire department to replace 35-year-old engine

By PAUL WOLF

SET ON replacing a 35-year-old fire engine that is "just plain tired," city officials are moving forward with the lease/purchase of a new one.

The Carmel Fire Department refurbished the "antique" 14 years ago, in a rebuilding job that was supposed to give it only another decade of useful life.

The new fire engine, according to Fire Chief Bill Hill, should be in service until 2028. It will be custom-built to pump 1,500 gallons of water per minute, which is about 250 gallons more than the old one.

Forty-thousand dollars has been set aside in next year's budget for the first lease payment — total cost is $300,000, according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

"This isn't a purchase that absolutely has to be made this year," Kersnar said. "But you can get to the point where it is too costly to make repairs."

Kersnar described an old fire engine as "like a shoelace that breaks down only when you are in a hurry," adding, "you don't want it to break down when you are trying to fight a structure fire."

At present, the department has three engines — one is a smaller "wildland" engine designed for rough terrain like Mission Trails Park. A custom-built rescue vehicle, which cost roughly $70,000, was delivered to the department earlier this month.

The new engine is also needed to protect insurance ratings downtown, the chief said.

Hill said the old engine will be sold at auction and will probably fetch $5,000 to $10,000. He said the buyer will probably be a volunteer fire department or a private landowner with large territory to protect, Hill said.

Mad, mad, really mad world

"I'M GOING to call the police!"

That's what the woman said. She was talking to my sister Peg in the parking lot of a grocery store. She said Peg damaged her SUV (sport utility vehicle).

First of all, you should know that Peg is Social Security age, she walks with a cane, and of all the people I know in this world, she's about a 10 when it comes to being thoughtful of other people, and other people's property. She's not the kind to fling open her car door with flagrant disregard for the car next to her.

Hours later, Peg's blood pressure was still up as she recounted the morning's event. Days later I am still incensed that she was victimized in this way, and thrilled that she stood her ground. Here's how it played:

A young woman (with a baby) stood at a pay phone outside the store, watching as Peg unlocked her car. A minute later the woman was beside her, YELLING that she had scratched her SUV. Peg, stunned, took a hard look and could find only a spot the size of a pinhead.

"I didn't scratch your car. I was very careful when I opened the door."

But the attack was on. The woman yelled and carried on in a threatening manner, not realizing she'd come up against someone with an Irish backbone.

"Go ahead and CALL the police," said Peg.

The woman flounced off, baby in arms, to the pay phone. Back she came. "It's busy," she said. Peg then enlisted the aid of a male passer-by to see if he could find the scratch. He looked, listened for just a moment as the tirade of insults and accusations continued, then said, "I'm not going to get in the middle of THIS," and walked away. (Where is Sir Galahad when you need him?)

The woman went to "call the police" again, came back, and Peg said, "Fine, we'll just sit here and wait for them."

And that's what they did, the two adversaries sitting in their cars. Knowing Peg as I do, I can imagine that steam was coming from the windows of her trusty old Buick.

A few minutes later, the woman came over and threw a few more insults, said she hoped Peg "learned her lesson," and drove off.

Guess what!

Well, guess what, dear readers. Without a doubt, Peg was the object of the latest scam. With people fearful of reporting any kind of minor traffic altercation for fear of having their insurance rates shoot up, it's easy to see how a shrewd operator can fake an incident, threaten to call the police, and talk some poor soul out of fifty bucks "to fix it."

In the heat of the sudden and fierce frontal attack, it didn't occur to Peg that she was being set up. But in the re-telling, it became clear.

Forewarned is forearmed. Keep your powder dry, my friends.

'Hot Chili Nites' are really quite cool

By KIERSTEN McCUTCHAN

HOT CHILI Nites, now in their third year, are hot indeed, possibly hotter than their namesake suggests. Revving up in time for spring, this Thursday night gala at Baja Cantina near the Quail Lodge has car buffs talking and spinning the wheels of their favorite ride.

Along with the band and barbecue,

Allen and Carol Cox came all the way from Walnut Creek to compete and win in the "Best Chevy" competition with their '61 Corvette convertible, which the couple has been restoring for more than a decade.

townies and valley people are talking shop — auto shop, that is. This one evening, every week, auto aficionados from the area gather to compare notes on whose is bigger, brighter or faster.

"We needed a good night for cars," said Pat Phinny, owner of Baja Cantina. He joined forces with Dave Marasco and Dave Gonzalez, members of the Baja Banditos (a local car club), and together they came up with Hot Chili Nites. Baja Cantina is the perfect place, a resurrected antique gas station filled with authentic auto and motorcycle memorabilia. Even the tunes coming from the speakers are vintage: Big Band, Elvis, Patsy Cline and swing.

Cole Foster, owner of a vintage car auto body restoration shop in Salinas, comes every Thursday with his girlfriend to meet cohorts and talk about cars. He considers Hot Chili Nites a premier local meeting place for shared interests.

Marasco said the evening is really about having fun and being safe while driving. "We really emphasize keeping it safe," he said. "This is what has made the evening so popular with families." The vintage and classic car parade draws all kinds of people, he said, not just car owners. The popularity of Hot Chili Nites is spreading, too, bringing people from as far away as Arizona.

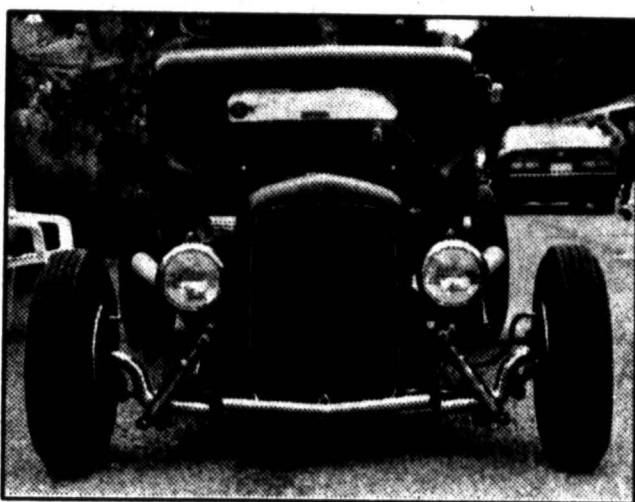

Hot Chili Nites requests that the display cars be manufactured pre-1972 — but it's not a hard-and-fast rule. "We don't just want hot rods, really anyone is welcome," said Marasco, a hot rod builder for more than 50 years.

"This is why our trophies are a little different than the ones normally handed out at car shows. We had a new Porsche Boxster parked in front of the restaurant, which was great. Our interests are to show versatility and diversity," said Gonzalez. Last Thursday, Allen and Carol Cox from Walnut Creek took home the "Best Chevy" award for their white 1961 Corvette convertible. Carol said her husband has been restoring the car for more than a decade.

Model Ts, Model As, hot rods, Chevy coupes, Mustangs, Corvettes, roadsters, muscle cars, Fairlanes, "woodys", pickups, Bel Airs, Corvairs, they're all there. "New cars keep showing up all the time," said Gonzalez.

"The best is when older people come to look at a 1930s or 1940s model and remember driving one back then," said Bill Flynn, a Baja Cantina employee.

A '32 Chevy coupe body with a '55 Buick motor, custom built by Cole Foster, is one of the hot rods on view Thursday nights at Baja Cantina's Hot Chili Nites in Carmel Valley.

Angeles. As reported in the San Jose Mercury, the lights came up as ushers began to pass plastic cannisters. But this audience wasn't in a charitable mood.

They started chanting, "Start the movie! Start the movie!" and one of the cannisters disappeared. A voice from above said: "There is still a bucket missing. We will not start the movie until that bucket is returned!" That's when the audience started stomping their feet, shouting an obscenity in unison, and throwing stuff. The management capitulated, and the movie started.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not advocating anarchy. But the practice of coercing a captive audience into giving money gets my dander up. I've staunchly resisted throwing even pennies into such buckets, but my beloved, perhaps embarrassed at the thought of looking cheap, has always kicked in. There must be many more like him because the Will Rogers fund takes in $2 million this way annually. Personally, I prefer to CHOOSE my charities and write a check.

Like I said, forewarned is forearmed.

Resting Well

Why Buy A Pillow Top Mattress?

by Brian Gingerich, Mattress Specialist

Even the best pillow top beds can mat down because of the upholstery materials used inside. Generally, these are fluffy materials that need to be fluffed up. That is difficult, if not impossible, to do properly when attached to the top of a mattress. Consumers are instructed to turn the mattress over frequently. That will only change it to a side that has been compressed by the weight of the mattress.

The best way to have the benefits of a pillow top without the drawbacks is to buy a separate, fluffable wool pad. It is easy to take off of the mattress for cleaning and fluffing and be used on any mattress you purchase in the future.

You get the benefits and comfort of 100% wool. It has natural, healthy insulating qualities that provide warmth in winter and refreshingly cool sleep in warmer summer months. Sleeping on synthetic polyfill materials will reflect body heat and promote "night sweating." A wool pad will wick away body moisture and allow air to circulate beneath you.

Sleep studies done by the American Wool Council have shown that sleeping on wool, you toss and turn less, wake up less at night and you'll have a more regular heartbeat.

The wool fibers offer springy, soft support that conforms to the contours of your body, easing painful pressure points on the shoulders and the hips.

You will relax quicker because you are more comfortable which causes you to fall asleep faster. You awake feeling refreshed because you have slept better.

Using a SnugFleece on top of our mattress is the best solution. It is the finest pure wool mattress pad made. You'll think that you're sleeping on a cloud.

You deserve a good night's sleep on a great bed. We can advise you on how to select a mattress and a wool pad that is just right for you.

For more information and a chance to lie down on a SnugFleece, stop by our mattress showroom on Carmel Rancho Lane, the main entrance to the Barnyard in Carmel or our factory at 701 Redwood Ave. in Sand City. Call us at 408-625-9911.

Urban animals need discipline

By KEN WHITE
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

WE ARE all aware that, as residents of a village in a forest, we share this special place with other of nature's creatures. It comes with the territory, and we all knew it when we settled here. Sometimes, though, things get a bit out of whack and the proper balance is disturbed. Such seems to be the case regarding the ongoing problem of our peaceful coexistence with the population of undomesticated animals in our midst.

In recent months the problem has become exacerbated to the point that some of our friends and neighbors have suffered serious damage to their property—damage costing thousands of dollars to repair. Sadly, it is not uncommon for repairs to be made only to have damage recur.

Left to the natural order of things, animal populations are controlled by the limited availability of food and the presence of natural enemies. Our urban Carmel wild animal population seems to have an abundant supply of the former and absence of the latter. Controlling the behavior of wild animals is not possible; controlling our behavior in relationship to theirs is, and there is action we can take to help restore the harmony between the species and the well-being of our community. I am speaking, of course, of the increasingly aggressive behavior of our large population of raccoons.

The SPCA, Monterey County Animal Control, California Department of Fish and Game and our own Police Department are prohibited by law and, in some cases, long-standing policy, from trapping and removing healthy animals. There is precious little these agencies can do when called upon for help. But there is something the rest of us can—and must—do. The City's Municipal Code (§6.08.170) specifically prohibits the feeding of any wild animal. But we feed them anyway, sometimes inadvertently through failure to secure garbage cans or by leaving our pets' food outdoors, and sometimes out of well meant but misplaced caring.

These animals have become reliant on food sources provided by humans. They are increasingly bold, demanding, and aggressive in their pursuit of sustenance and it is apparent that they have become quite prolific in their production of young. We must all be reminded that compliance with the law is our duty and that strict compliance with the prohibition of feeding wild animals will go a long way in helping to reestablish the peaceful coexistence between the species and in alleviating the tremendous damage and disruption to the lives of many of our neighbors.

Appeal to keep CV airstrip project alive

By PAUL WOLF

DESPITE A victory for project foes on Wednesday, the battle over a proposed housing and hangar project at the Carmel Valley airstrip has just begun.

Consider these two developments:

■ CV airstrip developer Lars de Jounge will appeal to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to reverse the planning commission's denial of the proposed "vintage air park," according to De Jounge's attorney Tony Lombardo.

■ Lombardo openly discussed a possible alternative plan: De Jounge would move forward with the 11 new homes and hangars but make the airstrip off limits to outsiders — with flights limited to residents of the airport.

While Lombardo suggested that the plan would reduce the use of the 58-year-old airport, at least one opponent was quick to downplay its advantages. "The basic concerns about the project would remain," said Nicole Nedeff. "Limited-use doesn't substantially change the project."

A representative of the county's legal staff confirmed that Lombardo would have to refile a brand-new application for an alternative project.

'Tough sell'

De Jounge and Lombardo knew going into the meeting that the planning commission would be an unfavorable venue; they heard critical remarks at past appearances. (Supervisors, they hope, may prove more flexible on certain property-rights issues.)

As expected, the commission voted 6-1 (with chairman Miguel Errea dissenting) to deny the project and its environmental impact report. Members will return July 8 to vote on their formal legal "findings" (justifications) for the two actions.

Commissioners called the project an intensification of the airstrip's zoning, which was frozen by county officials in 1970. They criticized Lombardo for only pitching only two of the planned 11 houses and for introducing his last-minute idea to limit use of the airstrip to residents only.

One commissioner, Maryn Pitt-Derdivanis, suggested that Lombardo was "maneuvering to make a square peg fit into a round hole." However, other commissioners were equally critical of the planning staff, blaming them for telling De Jounge and Lombardo that hangars are unacceptable.

Breaking his long silence, De Jounge told the commission, "We are trying to do something good here; we are trying to improve an asset. It is no use preserving an airfield if you have no place to store airplanes."

The key issue that will face the board of supervisors is whether permitting the homes and the hangars would constitute an acceptable change or intensification of land use.

Bank makes error in man's favor — he collects $610

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

WHEN A Home Savings of America customer allegedly tried to make the most out of a teller's mistake, the Carmel bank was left with a $610 loss.

The customer went into the bank May 27 to cash a $70 check. However, a teller mistakenly gave him $700, according to the Carmel Police.

When the teller caught the mistake, she left a message on the man's machine, asking him to return the money, police said.

The man reportedly came back to the bank June 4, claiming he'd already spent the money. He gave the bank a check for $20 and promised to pay the rest back in weekly installments, police said.

However, Home Savings says it never even received payment number two and hasn't heard from the man since.

He cannot legally keep the money.

WINDOWS

the couple had installed windows with painted aluminum exterior frames instead of the all-wood windows required by city regulations.

The Davidsons, in turn, said they were shocked that the city was threatening to force them to spend $25,000 to replace all their brand-new windows. They pointed out that, after all, the frames on the inside of the house are made of wood, and from the street, painted aluminum frames can't be distinguished from painted wood frames anyway.

At the June 24 meeting, Carmel Senior Planner Rick Tooker reminded the commission that in the past, aluminum-clad windows "have only been allowed in rare circumstances where those materials already exist" (and are just being replaced).

But Davidson pointed out how confusing the permit process can be for an ordinary citizen — one who doesn't know the minutiae of city requirements. He said one part of his application specified that "clad" windows would be used and the discrepancy was not discovered until his house was finished. He also questioned the fairness of the planning commission, which allowed another man to keep his side-by-side skylights — which had been installed without city approval. (The commission voted to retroactively approve Joseph Wagstaff's two skylights May 27, during the same meeting when commissioners first deadlocked over the Davidsons' windows.)

However, Commissioner Frank Wasko argued that the skylights were a good example of why the city shouldn't be granting exceptions.

"The whole basis for everything I try to do is precedent," Wasko said. "The absolutely perfect example is that the commission voted for the exception of skylights and in one month it's thrown in our face."

Commissioner Pope Coleman — who originally voted against allowing the windows May 27 — changed his mind.

"At the first hearing I felt that our rules were clear, so clear that I couldn't see how they could have been misinterpreted," Coleman said. However, after the commission reviewed its policies, Coleman said, "it was evident that our rules were not clear."

Commissioner Janice Fisher, who was absent at the May meeting, also voted to allow the Davidsons to keep their windows. Wasko and commission chairwoman Yoko Whitaker were the two dissenters.

The Davidsons were relieved that they wouldn't have to spend the $25,000 to replace all the windows in their house. It's been a tough couple of weeks for the family, Erik said. While they were waiting to find out about their windows, they were investigated by the city for allegedly running a day care operation out of their home, he said.

Even though it may look like a day care, the Davidsons assure everyone that the four children at their home are theirs.

Rafting accident claims Robert Wheat, husband, father, volunteer

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ROBERT WHEAT, a Monterey native and long-time Carmel Valley resident, died when his raft capsized in the American River near Placerville June 17. Wheat, who was controller at Quail Lodge for 20 years, is survived by his wife of 23 years, Jo Wheat, a librarian at Tularcitos, and two children, Alan, 19, and Kristen, 10.

Wheat loved rafting, according to his wife, and Steve Lawry, a co-worker at Quail Lodge. Lawry introduced Wheat to the sport several years ago, shortly after they met at work. "Rob liked to be on the edge, he was a very strong guy," Lawry said. "He was always pushing." Lawry rafted with Wheat on his last trip, along with several others experienced in the sport.

"He was one of my best friends, and he'd been running rivers with me for nine years," he said. "There was no lack of experience. Everyone was equipped right — we had the best equipment money can buy." Wheat was apparently knocked unconscious when he was thrown from the capsizing raft in the rapid called Meat Grinder. "It was a freak accident," Lawry said.

Lawry plans on taking a trip to the Grand Canyon, a river he and Wheat had rafted together, at the end of July. "This isn't going to stop his family from running rivers," he said. "He wouldn't want us to quit."

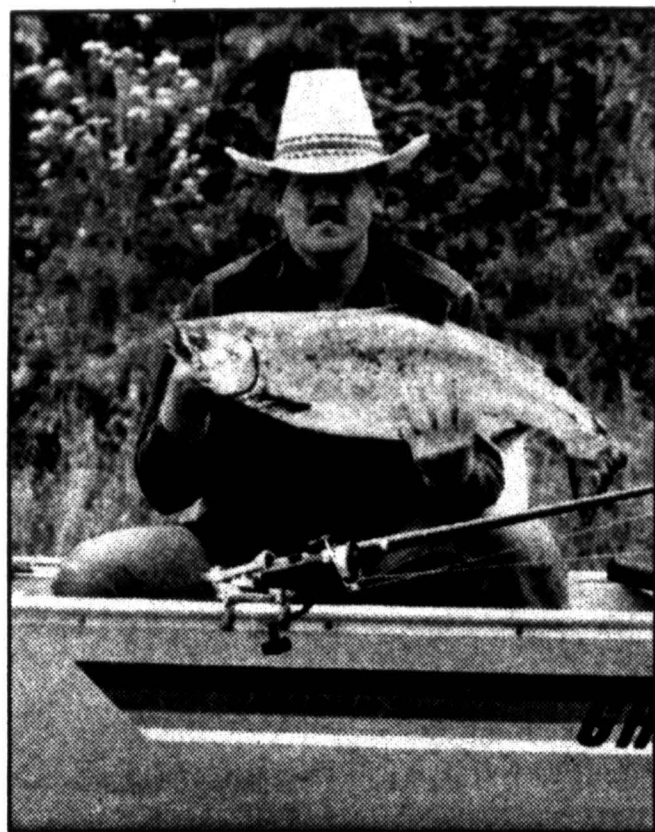

Wheat participated in numerous outdoor activities, including duck hunting, fishing and camping, according to Steve Gould, rooms division manager at Quail Lodge and friend to Wheat for 13 years. "One time we went fishing, and he caught a salmon with a fly rod and very light tack." After Wheat let the fish run a while, it came near to the boat, and Gould bent over with the net. "He said, 'He's not done yet,' and let the fish run more. After all that, he didn't even keep that fish. I hate fishing, and it was one of those experiences I'll never forget. It was like watching a ballet—it was beautiful."

At work, Wheat was known for being level-headed and clear-thinking. "As a friend he was always consistent, and sometimes I saw that as being cold and hard, but other times I thought it was the best thing I needed," Gould said.

A lover of good food and good wine, Wheat was a renowned chef among his friends. "Even small dinner parties were huge feats," Gould said. "He was always talking about wine, or his latest salad dressing recipe. He loved food and he loved people." Wheat also made his own beer and wine.

Michael Milligan, vice president of finance for the Boy Scouts, was Wheat's chili cook-off partner on many occasions, and vouched for his abilities. The pair won first place at a contest held at the Holman Ranch last year.

Milligan met Wheat when he became involved with Carmel Valley Boy Scout Troup 127 10 years ago, when his son became a member. Milligan was scout master, while Wheat was an assistant scout master, committee member and treasurer. "He was part of the team that helped develop the troupe," Milligan said. "When we took it over, there were only two boys; five years later, there were 55."

A friend described Robert Wheat's style of fishing as "like watching a ballet."

To Jo Wheat, his wife, Wheat's participation in the Scouts was one of many ways he gave back to his community and his family. "He was a really good dad to our children, and a really good husband," she said. "He had a good way of combining working and having time to play."

'The woman who laughs' was anthropologist, colleague of Margaret Mead

By TAMARA GRIPPI

BARBARA HONEYMAN Roll, an anthropologist who spent the last 20 years carrying on the work of Dr. Margaret Mead, died of cancer at her Carmel home June 19. She was 88.

A 40-year Carmel resident, Mrs. Roll distinguished herself in the field of anthropology when she developed a new system of "somatotyping" — classifying humans according to their physique.

In 1958, Mead invited Roll to contribute to her 30-year study of the inhabitants of Pere Village in Papua, New Guinea.

The two women became friends until Mead's death in 1978, when Mrs. Roll took over Mead's biographical, genealogical and personal research on the 800 villagers.

"You're going into a different world, although it's changing rapidly," Roll's husband, Fred, said of the village life they encountered. His photographs helped in his wife's mission: to capture the primitive world before it was gone forever.

Born in 1910, Mrs. Roll grew up on a thousand-acre tideland ranch in Washington. She was educated at home by her mother until age 13.

She graduated from Smith College in 1932. Thirty years later she was still tackling new subjects, including the Russian language. She taught anthropology at Moscow State University and at Monterey Peninsula College. In 1969, she invited one of the Papua villagers (who Dr. Mead studied 40 years before) to Carmel. John Kilepak, who was then 55, spent six months here, getting his first taste of western civilization: airplanes, cars and TV.

As a widow in 1975, she met Fred Roll — a man she had dated 45 years before — in a New York elevator. "We recognized each other immediately," Fred Roll said. The couple renewed their friendship and married soon after.

Mrs. Roll made 16 trips to New Guinea to continue Mead's work. In 1983 she collaborated with her husband on the book "Stori Bilong Pere," a genealogical history and photo chronicle of the villagers, which she handed out to the people she had studied for so many years. After her illness prevented Mrs. Roll from traveling, she continued to log births and deaths in her computer in Carmel and kept in steady contact with the (no longer primitive) village by fax machine.

Carmel friend Francois Brenot described Mrs. Roll as "not only a scientist in the pure sense of the term, but an exceptional human being. She had a contagious smile."

The villagers often called Mrs. Roll Meri oltaim lap — "the woman who laughs," her husband recalled fondly.

Mrs. Roll is survived by her husband, Fred Roll; daughter, Janet Hirsch Willis of Novato; son, Fred Hirsch of Portland, Oregon; and a sister, Mrs. Harley Engmark of Cupertino.

Sunset Center: No time for flinching

EVERY CITIZEN of Carmel should have the opportunity to take a back-stage tour of the Sunset Center auditorium.

Anyone who sees the embarrassing state of decay that is slowly metastasizing throughout the structure will understand why it was deemed unsafe for school children more than 35 years ago, and why the city council votes unanimously again and again to rehabilitate, rebuild, restore or repair the place.

Its acoustics are lousy, and this fact is obvious to most people who have attended concerts in the hall, and to the musicians and actors who try to perform there.

Maestro Bruno Weil, music director and conductor of the Carmel Bach Festival, says Sunset Center's acoustics are "nonexistent." Monterey County Symphony Music Director Clark Suttle has compared the hall's sound to "cheap speakers." And Actor Christopher Plummer, after a solo performance that was inaudible to much of the audience, once scrawled a plea on the center's podium, "For God's sake, get yourselves a new auditorium."

Performers and audience members agree that a hall with improved sound is desperately needed. But performers are saddled with all sorts of deficiencies that are, for the most part, hidden from the public.

The wings, for example, are each about the size of a postage stamp, making it impossible for proper scenery to be handled and leaving ballet dancers unable to leap onto the stage. (Lacking any room to run, they simply walk on.)

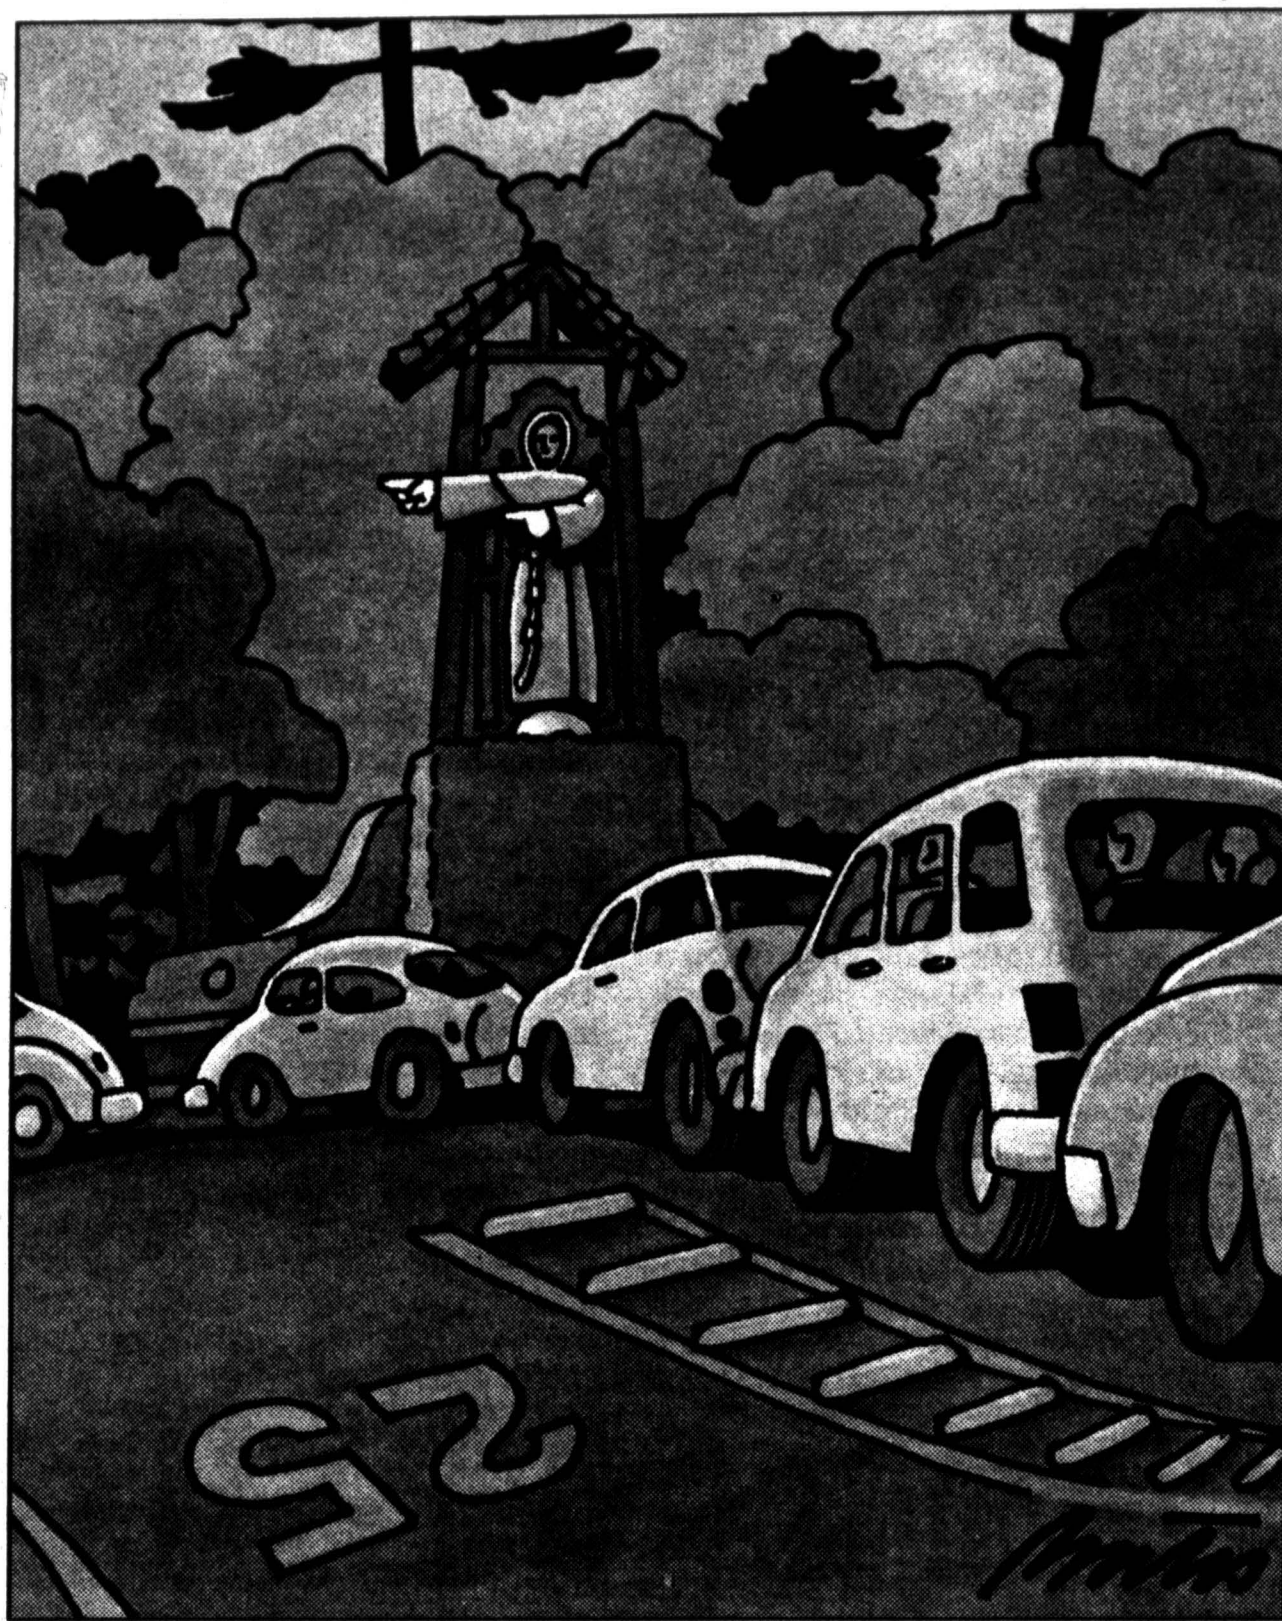

The rigging would be considered modern at the Colosseum, but is a colossal impediment to all but the most austere productions of the modern era.

Practice rooms are a mockery of what they should be. Basic hygiene needs — like restrooms — for the performers are woefully inadequate or not there at all. The wiring belongs in a museum. And the hall's antediluvian forced-air heater would give a small child nightmares for months.

The $5 million pledged by the council this week is for "deferred maintenance" — things that should have been properly maintained or fixed by the city long ago, even if only to bring the building up to code and make it safe for the public to use.

We congratulate the council for maintaining its unanimous stand in favor of fixing Sunset Center. The obstacles are formidable, but that is no reason for the city to soften its resolve. Sunset Center must be fixed, and the council is right to lead the way.

'Let's not balance budget on backs of employees'

Dear Editor:

Your front page article in the June 19 issue was well-written and researched by Paul Wolf. "Why Is Carmel So Poor?" is perhaps a far-fetched headline. But it rightly points out that, in order to have a balanced budget, there must be a community consensus on priorities. And it's "tough to give things up." But let's not balance our budget on the backs of employees.

Having been the mayor during the four years that included the recession of the early 1990s, I shared the difficult choices involved in reducing the work force in the city by 20%. Our work force became very lean. Meanwhile, the numbers of residents, business people, and visitors who are served by city staff have not decreased.

Your published pay scales are helpful; those of us who work for a living can recognize that these salary scales are equitable in today's job market. (They may look high to people who have been retired for many years). The city has indeed spent the last five years raising employee salary scales for parity with surrounding cities. Our staff deserves a living wage.

The fact that so many city employees are at the top of their salary schedules illustrates the long-time service and loyalty that we enjoy from our staff. Carmel-by-the-Sea is a vital city with environmental, cultural, business, and social attractions that are matched and enhanced by good employees; they should be a high priority. There is no reason to gasp at the fact that 60% of the budget is used to keep this balance.

Surely there are things less tough to give up.

Jean Grace, Carmel

Local pro leads a charmed life

BOB HICKAM is a lucky man. His first job on the Monterey Peninsula was assistant professional at Pebble Beach. Not bad for a kid just out of The University of San Francisco.

Then, at the ripe old age of 27, Hickam was promoted to head golf professional at Spyglass Hill. Obviously, the Pebble Beach Resorts management had big plans for him.

When they opened The Links at Spanish Bay they named Hickam as the inaugural head golf professional. He was not yet 30 years old, and other companies began to take notice.

Soon, he left the green grass side of the golf industry and went to work for Titleist. Then, another former Pebble Beach professional, Steve McLellan, grabbed the golden boy to work on his development projects as well as the Michael Jordan Golf Centers.

What's next? Commissioner of the PGA Tour? Not so fast.

The owners of the Resort at Squaw Creek called and needed an experienced pro to open their multi-million dollar Robert Trent Jones Jr. golf course. You guessed it! Hickam was off to Lake Tahoe.

Four years later and Hickam is a flatlander again. His latest responsibility? Director of golf at the new Greg Norman-designed Course at Wente Vineyards in Livermore.

Touch of Hollywood

Norman and Hickam were on hand last week for the opening of the course and they were obviously quite proud of their achievement. The grand opening included an ESPN interview from the first tee and actor Samuel L. Jackson adding a touch of Hollywood for the cameras.

"It's hard to pick a course that resembles Wente," said Hickam of the beautifully maintained course that winds through nearly 3,000 acres of vineyard. "(Norman) admires the work of Alistair Mackenzie and did not disturb the natural environment."

The par 72, 6,949-yard Course at Wente Vineyards features superb vistas of the oak-studded hills of the Livermore Valley. Dramatic elevation changes complement the layout, which is open to the public with green fees starting at $75, including cart.

"I feel fortunate," concluded

Bob Hickam's latest responsibility is to serve as director of golf at the new Greg Norman-designed Course at Wente Vineyards in Livermore.

Hickam. "I've had a number of good positions along the way, but I'm most excited right now." Talk about an understatement!

FROM THE CLUBHOUSE: Former Rancho Cañada Assistant Professional Brennan Langley of Carmel has joined Hickam at Wente Vineyards as assistant professional. Call (925) 456-2475 for Wente Vineyards starting time information.

Carmel's 'Boys of Summer' take to Larson Field

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CARMEL YOUTH Baseball's own edition of the "boys of summer" took to the field as the Mustang and Bronco Invitational kicked off at Carmel's Larson Field June 24.

An exhibition, the double-elimination tournament featured All-Star Mustang (9-10-year-olds) and Bronco (11-12-year-olds) teams from throughout the Monterey Peninsula who will be tuning up for PONY sectional qualifying play which begins in July.

Two Carmel teams will be represented in each division and will be managed by Larry Hunter and Mike Foudy (Bronco) and Bill Stoffers and Vaughn Feather (Mustang).

According to Howard Givens, president of Carmel Youth Baseball, some of the youths who are likely to shine are pitchers Travis Wilson and Ross Tieman and returning Bronco All-Stars Marcus Cziban and Charlie Crissan.

Last year the boys of Carmel brought their lunch pails to the diamond and went to work, bringing a new meaning of the word success to Carmel Youth Baseball.

The Mustang squad won the sectional for the first time ever and advanced to the regional while the Bronco team, behind the efforts of hurler Andreas Madsen and pint-sized powerhouse Covey Gonzales (.875 batting average), won their first-ever game at the Bronco World Series in Monterey.

Running until July 2, the Invitational features a week-day twilight contest at 5:30 and multiple games over the weekend.

Sports Wrap-up

Four local residents will tee off June 29 in an effort to qualify for the U.S. Senior Open, which is scheduled for July 23-26 at Riviera Country Club in Pacific Palisades. Pebble Beach Vice President of Golf Paul Spengler, Charles Well, Jr. and Carmel resident Doug Dusenbury will try to qualify at Diablo Country Club in Diablo, while fellow Carmelite Michael Lach will be attempting to qualify at Turlock Country Club.

Our bones stiff, unhooked

National Steinbeck Center opens at last in Salinas

THE LONG-AWAITED National Steinbeck Center in Salinas opens tomorrow, and those in the first wave of visitors are in for a surprise: Billed as a "multimedia experience of literature, history and art," the center — which opened its doors to the media June 22 — is not a whole lot like museums we have known and loved in the past.

By Margot Petit Nichols

The permanent exhibit area has seven themed galleries of interactive, multisensory exhibits: Vivid stage settings bring alive the places of John Steinbeck's world, and seven theaters show clips from films made from Steinbeck's books. The camper is there in which Steinbeck and his black standard poodle traveled across country — later commemorated in "Travels with Charley." The poodle (a charming impostor) is there, too. Children will love the permanent exhibits, although adults may feel they have stumbled into a children's theme park.

Steinbeck Archives

But of immense interest to scholars are the Steinbeck Archives, termed "the soul" of the center. Original manuscripts, oral histories, first editions, film posters and photographs — are available for research by appointment.

The inaugural art exhibition in the art gallery envelops the viewer in an atmosphere truly evocative of the late '20s, '30s and early '40s with paintings and etchings by Oscar Galgiani, Frances Brooks, Armin Hansen, Maynard Dixon, George Corbitt, Smith O'Brien, Judith Deim, Elwood Graham, Millard Sheets, Sam Colburn, Bruce Ariss and many others. Those of us who lived through that era or part of it, come away with nostalgia stirred by this remarkable exhibit. Younger viewers will be introduced to the flavor of that unique time in history.

There are two Peggy Worthington Best oils loaned by the Hawk Gallery in P.G., original art for a beautiful edition of "Tortilla Flat." The book and art are displayed under glass for close viewing. To those of us interested in reading Steinbeck's books, the museum store is a great pleasure: There you will find excellent hardcover editions of the author's works, as well as extremely handsome inexpensive Penguin paperbacks that sell for $9.95.

The center is located at One Main Street, Salinas, and is open daily 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. It is free to children 10 and under; $7 for adults; $6 for seniors and $4 for children 11 to 17. For information call 753-6411.

Concluding our NEW TO CARMEL? short takes on books by local people that provide background to the earlier Carmel, we mention this week the booklet, "Father Farrell's Wisdom," produced for Friends of Harrison Memorial Library by Libby Durein and Sharon Lawrence in 1991 and reprinted in 1992.

Father Farrell died in 1983, but for the five years preceding his death, The Carmel Pine Cone ran a column by "Father Larry."

Dorothy Newton suggested that Friends of Harrison Memorial collect the columns and put them in book form, and that is what Lawrence and Durein did. According to

Lawrence, "Libby Durein thought it would be a nice tribute See BOOKSHELF page 6B

Sommelier Fred Dame of Seagrams Classic Wine Company, Les Toques Blanches President Ole Blem and former president Bert Cutino enjoy a glass of wine at the 12th anniversary dinner for the organization.

Les Toques Blanches serve a feast most sumptuous

I SINCERELY believe that when this aristocratic group of executive chefs gets together, the gods come down from Mount Olympus to take charge. This year, at their 12th anniversary and annual dinner, presented June 14 at The Inn at Spanish Bay, Les Toques Blanches (The White Chef's Hats) France, USA, Monterey Chapter, again outdid themselves.

People and Places

By Dodie Barkley

After president Ole Blem introduced honored guests, we were invited to dine — and the experience was sumptuous. I was fortunate indeed to sit next to several famous local chefs, restaurateurs and food industry people including, Pierre Bain, owner of Fandango; Doug Ahlstrand; Remo d'Agliano, owner of Raffaello's; Glen Hammer, owner, The Hammer Enterprises, and others. Bain told me that Les Toques started when several executive chefs, all born elsewhere, got together to share menus, friendships and just socialize.

Newly inducted were two local executive chefs, Andre Lengacher, chef at Lugano Swiss Bistro and Christopher Horsfield, chef at the golf club at Quail Lodge. Both received the beautiful yellow and gold pendants from Ole Blem of Sylvia's Danish Pastry, as Bert Cutino, owner of The Sardine Factory and past president and advisory council chairman, swore them in. Cutino told us about his two-week trip aboard ship to Turkey, including Istanbul where Bella, his wife, invaded all the markets. Cutino spent time in the ship's kitchen, where he managed to concoct a few dishes with the chefs.

Honored guest, Keith Keogh, president and CEO, California Culinary Academy (CIA), was presented with a $1,000 check by Cutino. This gift from Les Toques Blanches will benefit student scholarships. Keogh informed the members that Cutino is now a new board member of the CIA.

Pascal Riffart, executive chef of The Inn at Spanish Bay, announced each course in a beautiful French accent. His words made the lemon-blueberry and crème fraîche tart, blueberry compote dessert, all the more appealing. Weight Watchers, I shall return!

Local Red Cross celebrates

"We're distinctly different from other Red Cross groups," said Peggy Mauz, chairman of the board of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter of the American Red Cross. Mauz welcomed more than 100 members and guests to the annual dinner and membership meeting. The June 17 happening, titled "Western Barbecue in the Country," took place at The Holman Ranch in Carmel Valley. Dorothy McEwen, owner of the ranch and a board member, generously allowed the chapter to use her property for its celebration.

Mauz went on to describe the 750 square miles from Pebble Beach to the San Luis Obispo County line that is in the chapter's jurisdiction.

"The most important event," she said, "was on Feb. 3, when the rains came. We were called in at 2 a.m., and worked in Carmel Valley and Big Sur, where roads and bridges were out. Our Disaster Steering Committee opened a shelter and met helicopters to help national guardsmen bring evacuees to the airport for coffee, sandwiches and telephones.

"We gave $125,000 and helped those people in the 86 homes which were damaged," Mauz said. "Communities were isolated and we made 204 mental health contacts in three weeks. Volunteers from all over the nation came to help us."

People were applauding all throughout her speech, and Mauz also told the group about the updating and computerizing of their office system.

Hugh Steven, who led the Pledge of Allegiance, was thanked for donating 20 gallons of blood — that's 160 pints, folks!

Mauz acknowledged the good work of the outgoing 1997-98 board members, and introduced the 1998-99 board.

Sitting in the lovely, Spanish-style patio, listening to all the good works the many volunteers there engaged in, was indeed touching. I was privileged to be there.

Peggy Mauz, chairman of the board of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter of the American Red Cross, Carmel Mayor Ken White and dinner committee chair Jean White turned up for the 1998 annual Red Cross membership meeting at the Holman Ranch in Carmel Valley.

Each table was attended by a woman wearing a lovely long dress, apron and straw hat, who brought each of us plates of sandwiches with a delicious English scone in the center. On the tables were silver trays with silver sugar pots, creamers, pots of jam and tiny teaspoons. This was followed by trays of wonderful desserts. The Monterey Peninsula in Carmel Valley. All gathered for the English Village Fete sponsored by Interim, Inc.

Every nook and cranny was filled with silent auctions, items for sale, including all kinds of potted flowers, cacti and succulents, games to be played, a marvelous Punch and Judy show and other entertainment.

The Classical Ballet School dancers made a lovely montage on the green lawns, dancing to "The Well Brought Up Young Lady," while a pretty English voice was heard singing "Come to the Fair."

There were contests for "Silly Ladies Hats" and "Gentlemen's Knobby Knees." Delightful guessing games were well-attended. Tarot readings and fortune telling gathered people in droves, and a maypole featured beautifully costumed dancers from Salinas Performing Arts.

More than 80 businesses and individuals donated items for the even.

So many people there spoke with English accents, it was like being in merry olde England around the turn of the century.

But the highlight was the fabulous "Afternoon Tea and Tea Time Treats" offered in Woodhull Hall.

way the guests were all oohing and ah-hing, you could see that they had never attended such a beautifully coordinated tea. I haven't. Boy Scouts from Troop 90 of Pacific Grove, carrying teapots, kept serving guests more tea.

Chair Jean Hewer and her many committee members, including event host, Katherine Massel, Dicken Scully, Hannah Priestley, Lewis Shutt and Diana Rosenthal and others, planned this outstanding English Village Fete, and when the word gets out about this incredible event, there will be many hundreds more attending next year.

because Father Farrell was an important part of Carmel and the peninsula. Father Farrell's columns are like flowers — they banish gloomy thoughts."

Father Farrell's kindly, smiling countenance looks out at us from the frontispiece, and after reading 73 of his very short columns of wit and wisdom, I feel that I, too, knew him. Lawrence says she has made it a practice to give a copy of the book to hospitalized friends or those who are ill at home to help raise their spirits.

The little book is available for $4.66 at First Murphy House, Lincoln near the northwest corner of Sixth, Carmel.

AN ESTIMATED $4,000 is needed to bring in a new gas line and to custom craft gas logs for the Harrison Memorial Library's main branch library fireplace. About a quarter of the needed funds have been collected so far. Bookmarks tucked into books checked out from the library carry a reminder that "the glow of a crackling fire will once again flicker with the warmth and ambiance of days gone by" when the funds have been collected. You can help rekindle the flame in the Bernard Maybeck-designed great reading room with a small donation sent to HML, P.O. Box 800, Carmel 93921. Please mark "Rekindle" on your check.

CARMEL AUTHOR/TEACHER Tad Wojnicki (pronounced Voynitsky) has announced that his Carmel Beach bonfire poetry readings have been moved to Lovers Point in Pacific Grove due to El Niño's devastation of the 13th Avenue, Carmel cove where poets have met in past years. The next poetry party is scheduled for Saturday, June 27 at sunset. Bring a potluck dish, a poem or a story. Refreshments will be provided. Everyone is welcome. For information, call Dr. Wojnicki at 770-0107.

THE CAREERS people choose often define who they are — or want to be. Jo Giese, author of "A Woman's Path," profiles 50 exceptional people in her book — 40 women and 10 girls — and examines the journey they each took to find their life's work. The author will be on hand for a booksigning from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Sunday, June 28 at The Thunderbird Bookshop. Information, call 624-1803.

THE GRAND OPENING of Steinbeck Bookstore and museum at 551 Foam St., Monterey, will feature an appearance by Nancy Sommer Steinbeck, widow of John Steinbeck IV, the author's son, who will read from her late husband's book, "Legacy" which will be published next year. The reading takes place at 7 p.m. Saturday, June 27.

Admission is $10, and seating is extremely limited. Call 646-9117 for information and reservations.

nation of the owners' 50-plus years experience in the restaurant business. They bring you their favorite recipes for astonishing seafood dishes, great steaks, and a large variety of appetizers and light meals.

Jack and his partner, Richard, wholeheartedly believe in exceeding their guests' expectations and do so with extremely friendly, attentive service and a quality that far exceeds their moderate prices. When was the last time you had steak & lobster for under $20? How about $15.95?! Along with the freshest salmon, halibut and swordfish, you really should try their cioppino, an Italian fish stew full of crab, clams, shrimp, scallops and salmon. To die for!

But the food is just part of the Monterey Jack's experience. Jack and Richard are sports fanatics, and their restaurant reflects it — with walls and display cases filled with sports memorabilia they've collected, customers have contributed, and their clientele have left behind. Whether you are a Jerry Rice fan, a Troy Aikman or Barry Bonds devotee, love to reminisce about the '27 Yankees or yearn to jump like Mike — you'll love just browsing while dining or watching the action on their big screen TVs.

Hot Bikes and Summer Nights

Cannery Row, Monterey — Historic Cannery Row celebrates summer on "America's Most Famous Street" with another "Race Night on the Row," Saturday, July 11th, honoring Laguna Seca's Dunlop United States World Superbike FIM Championship races. Cannery Row's partnership with Laguna Seca Raceway will again feature a street closure to vehicular traffic on Saturday night, between Hoffman and David Avenues. The street will be open to motorcycles only for cruising and parking in another spectacular "Race Night on Cannery Row."

Laguna Seca's "Race Night on Cannery Row"

This Cannery Row celebration of Monterey Peninsula's racing tradition at Laguna Seca is free and open to the public and will feature two bands, motorcycle exhibits and merriment guaranteed to entrance the crowds of race fans attending the races at Laguna Seca earlier in the day, as well as throngs of local residents who come down to the Row to enjoy the awesome spectacle of hundreds of historic to "track ready" cycles parked the length of the street.

The bayside Steinbeck Plaza (Prescott & Cannery Row) will feature rock and boogie music by "Juke Box." At the plaza of the El Torito Mexican Restaurant (Hoffman & Cannery Row) more entertainment will be provided by the "Broadway Blues Band."

CALLING ALL "ROW RATS"

Cannery Row's corps of volunteers (known as "Row Rats") for public projects and events like "Race Night on Cannery Row" are seeking additional volunteers interested in helping stage events open to the public on the Row. Hard work, camaraderie, and special perks from Cannery Row businesses and restaurants help make the jobs—such as marshalls, vehicle control, communications, traffic barricade monitors—important jobs that you can really have a good time at. New "Row Rat" volunteers can contact 648-8132 for more information. You, too, can be a "Row Rat."

ALL THAT JAZZ

KALISA'S 40TH ANNIVERSARY AT LA IDA CAFE, SUNDAY JULY 5TH

One of the true legends of Cannery Row celebrates 40 years in the business on Cannery Row — Kalisa Moore, better known to most of her fans as "The Queen of Cannery Row." An informal pot-luck party will be held at the La Ida Café, across from the Monterey Bay Aquarium at 851 Cannery Row on Sunday, July 5th.

The La Ida Café is the actual scene of one of John Steinbeck's most famous tales in "Cannery Row" (1945) of old Ocean View Avenue in the 1930s. The La Ida, owned by the venerable Yee family, was vacant forty years ago and was just the opportunity Kalisa was looking to open an eclectic international style restaurant. She's been there ever since.

Her tireless and unselfish efforts to keep the Old Row alive in the hearts of true believers are legend. Among her many accomplishments are the establishment of the Cannery Row Foundation in 1993, the annual John Steinbeck Birthday Party, and Cannery Row's famous "Sardine Eating Contest."

Without she and her bevy of "Flora's Girls," no Cannery Row celebration is complete without her.

STORY AND PHOTO/MARGOT PETT NICHOLS

IT WAS the third annual "D.C.'s Public Dog Party" on Carmel Beach June 21 and dozens of dogs arrived with their families who came bearing hors d'oeuvres for the two-legged attendees, treats for the four-legged guests, and contributions for the SPCA. Over $200 — as well as blankets, towels, dog food and such miscellany as teething bones and toys — were donated.

Purpose of the beach bash for bowlers was twofold: To benefit the SPCA and to celebrate D.C.'s June 21, 1995 adoption of two Carmel men as they strolled home late on a Summer Solstice eve. On that memorable evening, D.C. simply insinuated himself between Clark Coppock and David Potigian as they walked along Sixth Avenue after dinner, and then trotted home with them. Since then, D.C. has divided his time between the two friends' apartments in the same building, deciding each evening with which dad he will spend the night. For this reason, D.C. has no surname — like The Artist Formerly Known as Prince, Sting, Flavio, Cantinflas and other monominkered celebs.

During the day, D.C. serves as CEO at Su Vecino Court's Port of Carmel Travel, which was founded and is managed by Dad Clark. Dad David is just a short distance away down the court and across Dolores Street at Gallerie Amsterdam.

Because no one knows where D.C. came from (although every means to locate D.C.'s original family was exhausted), his true age is not known: His vet estimates D.C. to be around 13 and his personal genealogist says D.C. is a smoushond — a sort of Dutch terrier.

At the party, bashful and winsome D.C. was sporting not only a green SPCA kerchief, but a leg bandage as well, having recently undergone a little surgery from which he is recuperating nicely. He loves cheese, eats politely, and has learned to be a gracious host at the annual party — although just as many of us who are innately shy, he runs out of small talk after the first hour or so.

Food with a flair served up at Billy Quon's Rotisserie

FOOD WITH a sense of humor might be Billy Quon's description of the whimsical selection at his new restaurant. The dinner menu is headlined, "Welcome. Let the Evening Begin." Thank you, we shall! Both Billy and his strikingly beautiful wife, Teresa, have the gun turret vision necessary to maintain an efficient restaurant operation. They are everywhere! He, flashing the smile with which he's dazzled Peninsula-lights at Pebble Beach, the Rio Grill (B.T., i.e., Before Tollner), and points in between and outward. She, charming with glances darting between the entrance and the kitchen.

Whatever your chuggin', chompin' and chewin' pleasure, you'll find it chez Quon. The full bar jumps adjacent to the display finishing kitchen, and yet, somehow, the noise level is contained within the Dijon-colored walls and the asymmetrical bamboo space dividers placed strategically and attractively. If sunlight and moonlight are your thing, there are a half dozen tables outside from where you can enjoy Jack's Peak and an enormous display of mauve and gold lantana.

The wine list is "user friendly" with its contents categorized with savvy and humor. Drink orders from the bar are tended to with dispatch and are accompanied with a basket filled with warm, crispy on the outside, poppy seed rolls. I also had to play and experiment with the bright crimson salt which I initially rejected, incorrectly identifying it as something fiery.

There are appetizers to satisfy any palate; a hearty soup of the day, duck or vegetarian spring rolls with an interesting mango sweet and sour sauce, "wings," and a new (to me) firecracker corn. Chef Ted Consoli strips the kernels from fresh cobs, then sautés them with jalapeño slices in chili oil before mounding them on an oval plate. This is a must-try for the chili heads among you.

A vegetarian pizza made with the fresh vegetables of the day, gorgonzola and mozzarella cheeses and flavored with a rich pesto sauce, vies for oven honors with a duck pizza, topped by spicy tomato sauce. This time the mozzarella is complemented with a smoked gouda.

Without a doubt the show stoppers are the luncheon rotisserie bowls and the dinner version, "A Wok on the Wild Side." The wok (Asian cabbage salad, steamed rice, a duck spring roll and a choice of all veggies, poultry or seafood) contained enough food to make a respectable lunch the following day. Again you may want to order one for two persons and then dance your fork around some of the other entrées.

Our first visit, Bert ordered the delicious lemon herb rotisserie chicken. It came with caramelized onion mashed potatoes and green fresh asparagus spears. Speaking with Billy, he enthused about the ease of complete takeout dinners of rotisserie crispy duck, chicken and half or full racks of Szechwan ribs. Terrific for the business community in whose heart the restaurant sits, but I for one would like simply to take home a whole bird and then play with my own chosen accouterments (a fancy way to say "my fridge's leftovers"). There doesn't seem to be anywhere on the Peninsula where you can buy a rotisserie chicken that weighs more than 20 ounces. Quon's run between 3 and 4 pounds!

There are 14 entrées from which to choose, and range from lamb with a mint risotto and a port wine sauce to barbecue Thai shrimp tossed with bow tie noodles, green onions, and a ginger and cilantro butter.

Desserts are complex, so I crept out to the kitchen during a momentary lull to watch Chef Ted construct a banana Napoleon. Crème à l'anglaise cradled with layers of crème brûlée (baked flat in a sheet pan), sliced fresh bananas, torch-caramelized sugar, and sweetened baked wonton skins. Another edible "edifice" is the macadamia nut hula cheesecake.

But definitely, the high-calorie mega star is the Arctic Kona fudge sundae assemblage. Six individual clay potted sundaes arrive smoking on dry ice. The order is priced at $12.95 for two to four folk sharing the chocoholic blowout. Anyone want to join me? Bert's not a chocolate lover.

About the Cover

Cimarron

Carmel Ocean Front

Originally built as a Taos pueblo for actor Richard Dix, and subsequently owned by writer Gustaf Lannestock (happy-hour host of local and literary luminaries), Cimarron today pays homage to its southwestern heritage in a sumptuous reincarnation designed to stand the test of time. It's stylish, easy elegance is perfectly suited to an ocean-front setting and a casual and supremely comfortable existence. Two impressive bay windows function as panoramic seascape paintings, making the shore and ocean beyond integral and breathtaking parts of the living room and master bedroom. Two additional bedrooms en suite and a cozy guest cottage overlook the enchanting courtyard garden with its splendid stone and brick work, two fountains and the rainbow colors of myriad flowers. Lillies spring up, it is said, from Lannestock's 1930's plantings, some of which were transplanted by John Steinbeck to his own garden in the hills near Los Altos.

"Carmel Legends"

No. 8

One of the enduring games played by residents of Carmel is "Why, I could have bought that place for 'X' dollars back in 19XX!" Hardley anyone who's been here for more than 15 years has failed to play this game. But the alltime loser was a Frenchman named Honore Escolle who did, in fact, sell the square block on which CARMEL PLAZA now sits for $10 in 1893. Honore had come from France in 1852 at the age of 15. He started a bakery and general store in Monterey, but his real passion was ranching and cattle. He bought the wooded hills at which is now the north end of Carmel, but his cows were out-flanked by the deer, so he sold it. We don't know that his sale of the site of CARMEL PLAZA, then 27 lots and now 50 thriving shops, was a distress sale, but by then Honore was in his late fifties, had 14 children, and may have felt some pressure. Let's see, the real estate commission would have been 60¢ then, maybe $600,000 now... "Why! We could have bought..."

New driving range approved at Pebble Beach Golf Links

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE MONTEREY County Planning Commission has okayed an expansion of the driving range at the Pebble Beach Golf Links — a project that Pebble Beach Company officials say is needed for everyday practice for resort guests and residents who play the world-famous course, and which is especially necessary to accommodate two big golf tournaments which the company will be hosting — the U.S. Amateur Championship in 1999 and the U.S. Open in 2000.

"The existing driving range has been inadequate for years," said Mark Stilwell of the Pebble Beach Company. "It's too narrow and too short, especially when you have Tiger Woods or John Daly driving the ball 280 or 300 yards," he said.

The existing driving range has its tees at the intersection of Forest Lake Rd. and Stevenson Rd., just east of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. The range will be extended to the north, where a new set of tees will be located, increasing the capacity and length of the driving range.

Six single-family home sites previously proposed for the property have been pulled from the proposal. According to the EIR for the company's lot program, the land where the driving range will be located is zoned for up to 52 homes.

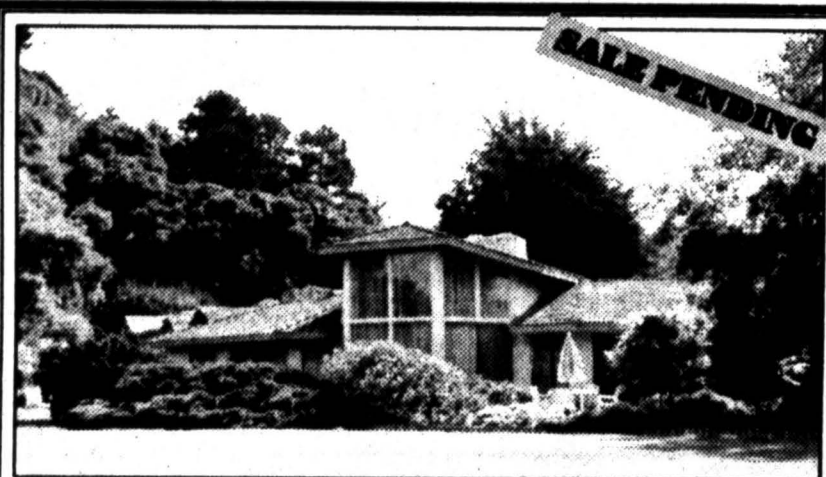

The company's new golf course, if approved, will replace the equestrian center and occupy most of the land north and east of the driving range. The company is also proposing to build a new equestrian center near Highway 68.

Planning Commission honors 76-year-old Murphy house

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Planning Commission voted to designate a 76-year-old house on Crespi Avenue as officially "historic" — a month after members questioned whether they had enough information to honor the home.

After the Carmel Preservation Foundation expanded its report to the commission, members were satisfied that the two story Tudor style home qualified in at least two categories.

Voting unanimously, the commissioners also praised owners Lynden Whitman and Kristen DeMaria, sisters who grew up in the home which was designed by George McCrea and built by M.J. Murphy.

"I'm thrilled when someone wants to designate their house and add to our heritage," said Planning Commission Chairwoman Yoko Whitaker.

Enid Sales, president of the foundation also praised Whitman and DeMaria "for hanging in there."

In the end, "the preponderance of evidence" proved the house to be worthy, Sales said.

Carmel Planning Staff agreed that the house qualifies under the architectural distinction category and cultural heritage.

"The resource embodies a beautifully crafted, classic Tudor style architecture valuable to the community," Planning Director Brian Roseth wrote in his report.

Commissioners defended the delay, arguing that the city should have clear documentation for any designated house. "We have questioned criteria in the past and that's one reason we want to be sure everything is accurate," said Commissioner Janice Fisher.

Whitman, who is in the process of selling the home, said she and her sister were fulfilling the wishes of their mother by preserving the house.

Realtor says where there's a well, there's a way

By KIRSTIE WILDE

DIRT PLUS water does not equal mud. In the Monterey Peninsula, dirt plus water equals money.

Pebble Beach attorney Saul Weingarten found that out this month when a gorgeous piece of property he owns in Carmel Valley — which has been on the market with no takers for years — suddenly captured a buyer willing to pay $300,000-plus.

The difference was water, 20 gallons per minute, pumped from a depth of 600 feet by a brand new well. And Weingarten didn't pay for the drilling.

Weingarten's real estate broker, Larry Scholink, put together the unusual deal — and predicts that the Carmel area will be seeing many more wells, and creative contracts, in the future.

"Without water, you have nothing. You have a park," says Scholink, who has drilled two wells himself in recent years. And he says the current water-hookup moratorium is forcing people to go "back to the future" — finding water the way their great-grandparents did.

Buyer beware, big time

Scholink's deal put the cost of the new well squarely on the buyer, a father of two from Pennsylvania who plans to move his family back to Carmel Valley after a 24 year absence. Lee Strom told The Pine Cone that the $35,000 he fronted for the well — with no guarantees at all — turned out to be a very good deal for him, too.

"The property could have cost me up to $100,000 more if there was already water on it," Strom said. "By taking the risk myself and drilling the well, I figure I saved money." He also has the freedom to build four bathrooms and a swimming pool — water luxuries which are just a fantasy to Cal-Am customers who didn't install them years ago.

Lee Strom can close escrow and build a home for his family on the Carmel Valley lot he wants to buy, thanks to the successful $35,000 well he drilled on the property.

Had the well come up dry, though, Strom's only option was to walk away from the deal. He was "tremendously nervous," he said "because well-drilling here is a whole different ball game. In Pennsylvania, a typical well costs $8,000 total, your probability of hitting water is 90 percent, and you don't need a permit."

Strom hired a water witch, who brought his own Y-shaped willow stick to divine the best location to drill on the 10-acre property. He predicted at least five gallons per minute at a depth of 450 feet (Monterey County requires at least 3.5 GPM for a single-family house.)

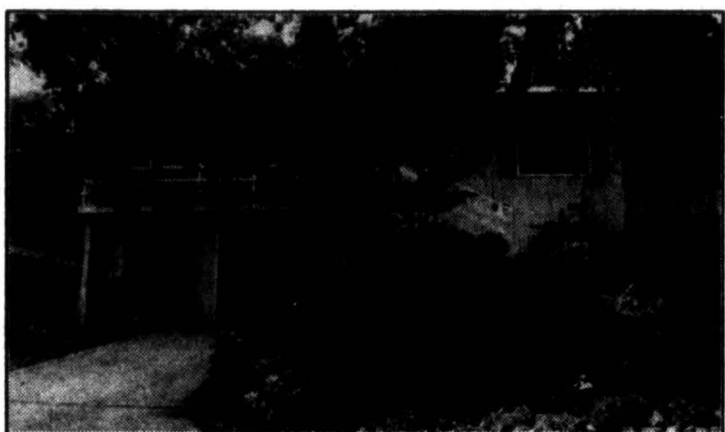

Strom made sure his budget could stand another 150 feet deeper than that, just in case. He wanted to make sure his well was at a healthy "drought-proof" depth.

It took Salinas Pump a little over a week to drill the well. Owner Mark Thornton says his business is picking up considerably on the Monterey Peninsula. "We are drilling 40 percent more wells over there than last year," he told the Pine Cone. "We are hitting water in 90 percent of them. The quality has been good, too, except (like Cal-Am's Carmel Valley wells) the water has to be filtered for elements like manganese and iron."

Weingarten is happy that his buyer hit water and now the sale can close escrow. He also has some advice to others who wonder if they, too, could get a permit to drill a well.

"Basically, when you own your land, you have the rights to the water below it. I'd tell them to go for it."

CBA grants 'not a proper function of government'

Dear Editor:

The City Council of Carmel recently voted, with one exception (Barbara Livingston), to grant the business community $116,000 with the "hope" of bringing more visitors to Carmel. The city hopes the additional visitors will spend freely and the city will benefit from the sales/occupancy tax that hopefully results. Grants for the prior three years amount to $364,000, and for the past four years $480,000.

I oppose these grants. Carmel is primarily a residential community. It is not a proper function of government to subsidize a profit-making group. Much more worthwhile projects to benefit residents and visitors alike are crying for money. A couple of examples: the streets are in bad shape; and the projected amount of tree work as a result of pitch canker will probably be very large.

Furthermore, it is impossible to know how much the city gets back in additional revenues. Just to break even and get $480,000 back (possibly a long shot) at the 10% occupancy tax rate would require about $4,800,000 of additional room rentals, or at 1% (the city's share) in sales taxes $48,000,000 of additional store sales. Did the city get its money back? There is probably no way of knowing.

If the business community feels strongly that additional business results from these grants, they should be glad to pay. Since they are asking the city to pay may mean that the business people are not willing to risk their own money, but if the city is willing to pay, let the city do so. The businessman has nothing to lose. Well, I am not willing to have some of my tax money "thrown away" on a risk that the businessman is unwilling to take with his own money.

I think the city council has done a poor job, in this case, in making a decision that was not well thought out. Let's ask the council to do more clear thinking before making other decisions.

Slow down!

Dear Editor:

From my vantage-point overlooking the Carpenter Street-Highway 1 intersection, I'd like to direct your attention to a reality that, it seems, few are aware of: SPEED.

It appears that since the highway speed limit was returned to 65 mph drivers have become blind to all other posted speed limits. From the North, the posted limit reduces to 40 mph at San Luis Ave., but few notice. Cars, trucks, buses, law enforcement, city, county, and state vehicles all breeze through the intersection and down the hill at an average of 50-65 mph, totally ignoring the posted limit of 40 mph.

Vehicles using the Carpenter Street exit travel 50+ mph down the ramp that is posted at 35 mph and then reduces to 30 mph and 25 mph on Carpenter and Serra, respectively. Drivers who turn off the Highway onto local streets do so at incredible speeds even though limits of 25 mph are clearly posted. It is only a miracle that we haven't seen more crashes . . . but I for one have seen some very close calls and heard a lot of squealing brakes and skidding.

The same situation exists traveling North. Highway 1 becomes a raceway. Just try to drive the posted 40 mph and see how everyone angrily passes you at 55+.

Our existing roadways are not designed for these higher speeds. If Hatton Canyon is built, it will be four years to completion. I think it is incumbent upon us all to observe the posted limits on what is, in reality, a local road.

E.A. Whiting, Carmel

Take the signs down

Dear Editor:

We have been a valley residents most of our lives. We love the valley road, with all its natural beauty. My husband and I have been more and more frustrated to see people posting up "Happy Birthday" signs — and others — along the roadway. We . . . Love . . . You . . . Happy . . . 13th!, etc.. It's not the signs that initially upset us, it's the lack of people being responsible enough to take them down, once the day has passed.

We spent a Saturday morning taking signs down that were still posted, and picking up several more laying on the ground at the foot of telephone poles. We are asking the community to please not litter our roadway. Signs for weddings and garage sales & birthdays are fine . . . just please be responsible and take them down! Last week there were 23 signs along our valley road, most have been up for not just days, but months!!!! You know who you are. Our valley road is just too beautiful to be littered upon and taken for granted.

Ron and Evelyn Collins, Carmel Valley

Rayne's 'amazing store'

Dear Editor:

My most recent issues of The Carmel Pine Cone newspaper have just been delivered by the postman . . . only to bring sadness. Many a happy moment has been spent in Carmel since 1943 . . . that wonderful year which marked my birth, along with the opening of Derek Layne, Ltd..

Mr. Derek Rayne has died. His clothing store had suffered the same fate several years earlier . . . but the passing of Derek Rayne, Ltd., did not seem so permanent then. I still saw Mr. Rayne around town and talked with him on and off during my visits to town. But now another era has truly ended in Carmel. Mr. Rayne's store was where every boy in town went for his "Sunday go to church" clothes. It was a very gentlemanly place . . . full of dignified men who were well-spoken and well-dressed. Casual dress in those days had a whole different meaning. I can still remember the honor of entering into this "man's place" . . . it was like a rite of passage. Joe Tracker's comment is absolutely correct.

"It was the most dignified store on Ocean Avenue. When I walked into that store it wasn't like walking into a men's store, it was like walking into a classroom for diplomats." I can still remember the smells of fine leather and wonderful wool sweaters . . . along with the smell of tobacco pipes. It was one of those events in life that taught me about what it was to be a gentleman and to appreciate the "finer things in life" . . . like dressing well and the differences in the quality of clothing products. It was a truly amazing place. I shall definitely miss Mr. Rayne and his wonderful store!!
